Oil Price

Crude oil prices have gone up in the last two weeks as most countries began to relax lockdowns and restrictions that were set in place to curb the spread of the coronavirus.

The International Energy Agency (IEA) expects crude stockpiles to reduce by about 5.5 million barrels per day in Q2 2020. According to oil price, Bonny light closed at $29.84 per barrel, Brent crude closed at $32.50 while American headline crude, WTI, closed at $29.65 on Friday.

With production cuts from Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC+) and top producing countries like Canada, the United States amongst others, the market seems to be gaining its balance.
